What's within your control

Hello Rebecca,

After last week's whirlwind of international events, and as we strive to navigate the days ahead, this week let's turn our focus to what is within our control—with some helpful financial literacy tips in the articles below, curated from recent headlines.

Here's an empowering reality: though large-scale political and economic events of the day may feel unpredictable and unmanageable, it's the personal decisions YOU make every day that truly shape your life and future—far more directly than any election outcome. And just as a voter exercises their power at the ballot box, you can exercise profound control over your financial destiny through your intentional choices each day.

So, this week, arm yourself with this knowledge and then show up to vote with your money, time and resources, for the future you create. These articles can help get you started. Together we can continue to find areas where you could make more of an immediate and/or lasting impact for your family and the world. Enjoy and share!
